MEET THE STAFF
Growing up playing sports, predominantly football, played a huge role in my life and I feel like it shaped who I am today. The dedication and preparation required off the field is so vast that when applying it to other areas of my life it seemed like an easy task. After college I played football with a few minor league teams in Tennessee and Virginia and when my playing days were over I felt like I needed something to fill that void. I accepted my first full time teaching and coaching position in Carter County in 2009, teaching physical education and weightlifting and coaching football and basketball. It was a dream come true, but I was hungry for more. I went back for my M. Ed in Administration and Supervision and the next year for my Ed. S (Educational Specialist) degree. During all of this I was studying to become certified in Sports Nutrition and Personal Training on the side.

Fast forward 9 years and 2 kids (Briley and Aislynn) later I find myself hungry again for more competition. I began feeling like I had let myself go a little bit as I started getting older, as much of us tend to do with busy lives and hectic schedules. Working long hours being a teacher and a coach, I found myself always making excuses to why I was skipping the gym or why I was going through another drive through. So, when I stepped on a scale at 235 lbs. (the heaviest I had ever been), I decided from that point I was going to make a change, I was going to apply that discipline and dedication that I stressed so heavily to my football players to my own life and see where it took me. So, with this new goal in mind, I had to have something to work towards, a specific goal. As I was reading a Muscle and Fitness magazine I came across a contest called the Rock Hard Challenge. The contest was to showcase people who had incredible body transformations. The contestant who had to most significant body transformation over a period of 60 days was the winner. With my knowledge of fitness and nutrition I thought this was the perfect contest for me. Sixty days later, I drop 35lbs, won the contest and got featured in Muscle and Fitness magazine, which was one of the top things on my bucket list. During the contest, as I’m constantly monitoring my goals and adjusting my macronutrients to specifically fit my needs, I began to think, this is the type of service that a lot of people could really benefit from. So, taking that a step further really Mekesha and I wanted to gauge the interest of the public and see if the demand was there. The feedback we got was phenomenal! We gave it a week to go out and do some research and see what we could come up with and found that no one in this area was offering this type of service that a lot of people could really benefit from. So, taking this idea of a meal prep business in June 2017. As it began to quickly grow over the next couple of months Warrior Strong Fitness was born. Our passion for fitness and love of the culinary arts laid the foundation and we were eager to share that with everyone.

My fiancé Mekesha and I started our idea of a meal prep business in June 2017. As it began to quickly grow over the next couple of months Warrior Strong Fitness was born. Our passion for fitness and love of the culinary arts laid the foundation and we were eager to share that with everyone.

For burgers, we use a much higher-grade ground sirloin (93/7) instead of an 80/20 blend, and for our tacos we leave off the tortilla and use seasoned ground turkey. The convenience of the meals has been a major factor for most of our clients. Instead of running through a drive through full of processed foods or having to come home and cook dinner after a long day of work, they simply pop a meal in the microwave and they are ready to go. There’s never any question of what they are eating, and each meal has already been pre-portioned, weighed and all the macronutrients calculated for them, so there’s nothing to do but sit back and enjoy!

We currently service 15-20 clients weekly throughout the tri-cities area and are always looking to take on new clients. We just welcomed our third child to the Warrior Strong family (Cayden Ray), so it is even more motivation to better ourselves and be positive role models for our children, as well as help our clients real their goals. If you have any questions, feel free to reach out to us at warriorstrongfitness@gmail.com or check out our Facebook page Warrior Strong Fitness and Meal Prep. We would love to help you reach your fitness goals!!
Singer-Songwriter Lazer Lloyd brings his "2018: We Love Our Veterans Tour" to The Down Home on 11/4/18

Singer/songwriter Lazer Lloyd will bring his unique blend of roots rock, Americana, folk, blues and country with a psychedelic twist to The Down Home in Johnson City on Sunday, November 4th as part of his "2018 - We Love Our Veterans Tour" The focus of this tour is to honor those who serve and raise awareness of many of the issues facing veterans, including struggling to re-integrate into society, food insecurity and unemployment. He will also use the tour to provide inspiration and encouragement through music. He counts many of our nation's heroes among his fans and friends and is honored to perform for them. He has played for many service-oriented communities across the country, including The Fraternal Order of the Eagles, The Amvets, VFW and American Legion Posts, and supports a variety of causes such as Vet 22 (veteran suicide awareness and prevention), A Touching Tribute (The Long War Memorial) and Standdown (helping veterans in need).

As always, Lazer Lloyd’s show will be full of humor, masterful storytelling, heartfelt lyrics, blistering guitar and the camaraderie he enjoys with his audience. The great listening room atmosphere of The Down Home is the perfect venue to experience Lazer's musicianship, kindness and peaceful message as he honors and connects with veterans.

Name: Rob Walker
Branch: United States Air Force
Age Joined: 22
Rank: E-5 Staff Sergeant
Years Served: 10 years

What made you want to serve our country?
I wanted the satisfaction of serving our country. I needed money for college, and wanted to learn a trade that would help me in the civilian community.

The military is an excellent choice to begin your career. I gained experience in a trade, leadership skills, and a good attitude, life experience, and discipline. The military is a great place to start!

What is your favorite quote?
"You will meet some of your best friends in life in the military."

Did you make any close friendships while in the service?
Yes, I met some of my best friends ever in the military. I stay in contact and visit them whenever I can. This is my best take-away from the military. Best friends for life.

What was the best and worst 'military' food you were served, and why?
MRE's (meals ready to eat)-worst food. This is food served when you are out in the field. MRE's have gotten better over the years but it's still not good food. It will just keep you alive and from getting hungry. Best food, really can't remember anything great. However, the dinner halls served good food overall.

How does your military experience affect your life today?
The experience I gained in the AF helps me everyday. It gives me a can-do attitude! I work remotely in my current job and it gives me the drive to get up and get started everyday without having a boss looking over my shoulder making sure I am actually working. I am self-motivated! I am driven to do a good job everyday!

Were you awarded any medals or citations? How did you get them?
I was given several achievement medals and good conduct medals. The achievement medals were for supporting Desert Storm and the Gulf War. The good conduct medals were for doing a job well done and not getting into any trouble.

Do you recall the day your service ended?
Yes, May 22nd 1998. I was at Shaw Air Force Base in Sumter, SC.

What did you do in the days and weeks afterward?
I had a job already lined up before I left the A.F. so I started work the next week at Lockheed Martin Aircraft Center in Greenville, SC. My experience in the A.F. gave me the edge in getting this job.

Where did you travel while in the service?
I traveled mostly in the U.S. while I was in. Texas, Nevada, Louisiana, North Carolina, and traveled once to Cold Lake, Alberta Canada.

Why did you pick the service branch you joined?
I had several good friends who joined the A.F. and they provided feedback about their experience. Also, I felt the A.F. would provide me the best skills that would translate to the civilian workforce.

Do you recall your first days in service?
Yes, I was very scared, nervous, and homesick! However, I knew I had made the right choice! Joining the Air Force is the one BEST decision I have ever made in my life!

Was there something special you did for "good luck"?
I prayed every day!

Did you work or go back to school?
I went back to school when I got out and finished my B.S. and MBA degrees in Business.

Is there anything you would like to add that we have not covered?
The military is not for everyone but for the right people, it's a great place to start. I absolutely loved my time in the Air Force! The experience, the training, the leadership skills, and the life-long friendships I gained while in the military is priceless.
October is Breast Cancer Awareness Month, which is an annual campaign to increase awareness of the disease. Other than skin cancer, breast cancer is the most common cancer among American women. Getting mammograms regularly can lower the risk of dying from breast cancer. The United States Preventive Services Task Force recommends that if you are 50 to 74 years old, be sure to have a screening mammogram every two years. If you are 40 to 49 years old, talk to your doctor about when to start and how often to get a screening mammogram.

What Are the Symptoms?

There are different symptoms of breast cancer, and some people have no symptoms at all. Symptoms can include—
- Any change in the size or the shape of the breast.
- Pain in any area of the breast.
- Nipple discharge other than breast milk (including blood).
- A new lump in the breast or underarm.

If you have any signs that worry you, see your doctor right away.

How Can I Lower My Risk?

Some main factors that influence your risk for breast cancer include—
- Being a woman.
- Being older (most breast cancers are found in women who are 50 years old or older).
- Having changes in your breast cancer genes (BRCA1 and BRCA2).
- Most women who get breast cancer have no known risk factors and no history of the disease in their families. There are things you can do to can help lower your breast cancer risk.

Although breast cancer screening cannot prevent breast cancer, it can help find breast cancer early, when it is easier to treat. Talk to your doctor about which breast cancer screening tests are right for you, and when you should have them.

National Breast and Cervical Cancer Early Detection Program: Screening Women, Saving Lives

Are you worried about the cost? CDC offers free or low-cost mammograms. Find out if you qualify.

Fast Facts About Breast Cancer

- Each year in the United States, more than 240,000 women get breast cancer and more than 40,000 women die from the disease.
- Men also get breast cancer, but it is not very common. Less than 1% of breast cancers occur in men.
- Most breast cancers are found in women who are 50 years old or older, but breast cancer also affects younger women. About 10% of all new cases of breast cancer in the United States are found in women younger than 45 years of age.

Everyone says life begins at 40……well my journey did too but with a different path than what I thought would happen. No one expects to hear the word cancer. But for whatever reason God chose to allow me to experience the road from diagnosis to remission. I won’t say that it wasn’t a difficult time because going through a divorce with 2 kids, finishing my bachelor degree and having to move back in with my aging parents while working a new job for the Federal Government was quite a challenge. There was a lot going on in my personal life to begin with but adding a diagnosis of cancer with 6 months of chemo and 30 radiation treatments on top of everything else was to say the least a little stressful. You ask me how I did it? My faith in God kept me uplifted. My positive attitude kept me moving forward. My friends and family kept me motivated to stay strong. I never asked the doctors my prognosis. I just kept saying what do I need to do now………let’s talk about the next phase of treatment. Now don’t get me wrong, I’m human and every now and then I would have my own little pity-party and cry. It’s a normal reaction to be upset, angry and say why me. But I didn’t dwell on it. I listened to my doctor’s advice, absorbed the love from my family/friends and remained faithful to God. I’ve been in remission for over 10 years now and I owe it all to Him. I want to encourage women of all ages to do self-breast exams and get their mammograms. Be knowledgeable in what to look for. Don’t dismiss even the slightest change in your body’s composition. The first change I noticed was a lump in my arm pit. Didn’t even have a clue it was an enlarged lymph node full of cancerous cells. I just thought it was an swollen gland. So please talk to your doctor and be aware of the symptoms not just during the month of October but all year long. It could save your life.
Dollywood is a favorite topic of ours here at Appalachian Wanderers. Dolly’s theme park at the base of the Great Smoky Mountains is probably one of our favorite places to visit. We’ve been pass holders for years and have excitedly watched as it has doubled in size over the last decade. Now a national destination, Dollywood sprawls over 150 acres and features eight fantastic rollercoasters, award-winning shows, and almost monthly festivals that draw millions each year. We just can’t help but love this place!

Of course, before Dolly showed up in 1986 with shovel in hand, the park went by another name: Silver Dollar City Tennessee. Herschend Family Entertainment bought the park ten years earlier and had worked on expanding the meager offerings Goldrush Junction provided, setting it on the path towards its massive success today. Did you know this was not their first foray into the theme park business? Dollywood actually has a sister park halfway across the country in Branson, Missouri. This was the original Silver Dollar City.

Unlike many of today’s modern theme parks which cost millions or even billions of dollars to construct over a short period of time, Silver Dollar City started off quite small. It experienced growth slowly and naturally over the decades. There was no master plan that transformed hundreds of wild acres into fantastical lands, carefully designed streets, or immersive attractions. This was no Disneyland, and yet, that special touch of magic can be found throughout this wonderful park nestled within the Ozark Mountains.

Much like its sister park Dollywood, Silver Dollar City began with a singular attraction. This one, however, was much more impressive then a steam train. Marvel Cave was first discovered by Native Americans hundreds of years ago and then rediscovered by settlers in the 1860’s. Exploration of the cave didn’t take place until 1880 or so, as prospective miners looked for marble to extract. While they didn’t find the coveted stone, this led to the cave’s name as Marble was corrupted into Marvel at some point. Adventurers were soon attracted to the monstrous caverns and a booming tour business quickly followed.

Not much changed on the surface for many decades until 1946. That’s the year that Hugo and Mary Herschend made their first trip from Chicago to visit Marvel Cave. The natural beauty so inspired them that they quickly moved to Branson and purchased the cave tour business. Joined by their sons Jack and Pete, they worked to improve access to the cave, installing walkways, lighting, and a stairway to replace the rickety ladder that had previously been the only access from the entrance. As visitors grew by the thousands, they realized they needed a way to entertain those who were waiting on top for their turn to venture into the magical world below. Silver Dollar City opened in 1960 and originally featured an 1880’s village with a working blacksmith shop, original log buildings, and even actors who would perform daily shows.

Today the park covers over one hundred beautiful acres perched atop the Ozarks. Seven rollercoasters, dozens of family and thrill rides, award-winning restaurants, and a wide variety of shows make it a favorite destination for all ages. Like Dollywood, the park is focused on growth and regularly opens new and innovative attractions. Despite the constant additions, Silver Dollar City has retained all of its charm. A thick canopy of trees blanket the pathways, helping to cool even the hottest summer day. This is by far one of the most beautiful parks we’ve visited in our travels with amazing landscaping, 1880’s architecture, and views that go on for miles.

The best place to catch those views are from the park’s fantastic lineup of rollercoasters. Wildfire is an ultra smooth B&M multi looping coaster perched on the mountainside and offers probably the best panorama we’ve ever seen from a coaster. Nearby you’ll find Powder Keg: Blast in the Wilderness. This family ride is a launch coaster that is surprisingly forceful and provides amazing airtime—that butterfly feeling when you fly out of your seat! Outlaw Run is a rollicking wood coaster themed to a stagecoach chase. The first wooden coaster by RMC (creators of Lightning Rod), it features three inversions along the wild layout. Thunderation is a runaway mine train that careens down the mountainside at a surprisingly fast pace. Families can enjoy Fire in the Hole (sister ride to our own Blazing Fury), as well as the Grand Exposition Coaster.

There’s so much to cover for this amazing park that we couldn’t fit it all in one article! Be sure to come back next week to discover more rides, shows, and the new-for-2019 festival lineup!
Exhibition of Lawrence Danecke and Roger Hankins
Paintings at Mason House Gallery

Greeneville, TN – Paintings by Greeneville artists Lawrence Danecke and Roger Hankins are featured at the General Morgan Inn’s Mason House Gallery throughout the month of November.

The exhibition titled “2Views: Paintings by Lawrence Danecke and Roger Hankins” is sponsored in part by The General Morgan Inn and the Greeneville Arts Council and runs from Friday November 2 through Friday November 30, 2018.

An opening reception, co-sponsored by Artspace 4 Gallery and Deidra – Your Personal Chef, is scheduled for Thursday, November 8 in both galleries. The public is invited and encouraged to attend the reception, enjoy refreshments and meet the artists from 5-7 p.m.

A fine artist of national reputation, Lawrence Danecke studied at both the School of the Art Institute of Chicago and Chicago’s American Academy of Art. After graduating from the latter and serving in the armed forces, he headed south to Florida where he built a successful career in commercial illustration and art education while raising his son. During his many trips from South Florida to visit family in Chicago, Danecke always enjoyed traveling through the natural beauty that is Tennessee. He finally settled here ten years ago and finds as much inspiration in Appalachia as he did in more tropical surroundings.

Danecke has dedicated his time and artistic energies to creating fine art in oil, acrylic and transparent watercolor for more than twenty-five years. With numerous awards, work in collections worldwide and representation in various watercolor publications, his highly realistic style has distinguished him among master watercolorists.

Although he’s been well recognized for an ability to capture a variety of subjects from landscapes, still-lifes, animals, waterscapes and botanicals to figures and portraiture, the vast majority of Danecke’s paintings in the show “2Views” are watercolor or acrylic paintings of nature and wildlife from both East Tennessee and South Florida (where his son still lives).

Since his last Mason House Gallery exhibit in October of 2016 (his ninth solo Greeneville show), Danecke’s work has been presented in juried exhibitions around our region and nationwide.

Six of Danecke’s pieces hung in the Virginia Highlands Festival Juried Fine Arts Shows of the past two years, including scenes of Abrams Falls and Flag Branch. An acrylic painting of Cades Cove fall foliage earned him the Committee Award in 2017. Another acrylic painting of a Greene County winter scene took a Merit Award there in 2018. This past summer, a transparent watercolor painting of a Cedar Creek scene was juried into a national show in Lynchburg, VA.

A bit further from home, Danecke’s work has received significant notoriety across the country these past two years as well. His transparent watercolor painting “American Wood Stork”, which is included in this current exhibition, was juried into national shows in Ocala and St. Augustine, FL, and took a prize in the Red River Watercolor Society’s National Juried Watermedia Exhibition in Moorhead, Minnesota.

A distinguished artist, craftsman, architect and teacher, Roger Hankins has been a significant figure in the East Tennessee arts community, and beyond, for more than forty years. His family’s Greene County roots extend from the late 1700’s, and the county has been fertile soil for Hankins – as a student, artist, teacher, and advocate for the arts – for much of his life.

Initially an architect, Hankins worked in Knoxville and New York with the acclaimed I.M. Pei; in addition, he received significant grants from the National Endowment for the Arts and the Ford Foundation. While in Knoxville, Hankins designed and oversaw construction of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial that still stands outside City Hall.

Following his retirement from architecture, Hankins turned his attention to fine crafts, designing and building architectural birdhouses; several are in corporate collections and in the Renwick Gallery, affiliated with the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C.

After a 40-year hiatus from painting, Hankins picked up his brushes in 2008 and began studying oil painting again, as he had in high school and college - where he had minored in the fine arts. Today, Hankins continues his mentorship with a nationally recognized artist in Atlanta, Georgia three days a month. His current works in “2Views” portray southern life and prototypical scenes of local interest through the lens of an American Impressionist artist. Although several of his most recent paintings are synthesized regional scenes, many are recognizable landmarks of Greeneville and Greene County.

Hankins is currently represented by the Art Market Gallery in Knoxville, a cooperative gallery of juried East Tennessee artists, which featured him this past September in their New Members exhibition.

In addition to creating fine art, Hankins also teaches a small oil painting class and encourages anyone interested in taking lessons to contact him. The four-hour classes comprised of both carefully designed exercises and “free painting” aim to provide the student with the tools and processes needed to be able to create many paintings.

MUDDY & BEYOND
by Anthony Wayne

Never one to waste any time, or sleep, when it comes to music related events, I found myself headed to Muddy Roots Music Festival in the beautiful area of Cookeville, TN. A peaceful journey across Tennessee, with a brief stop at the legendary McKay’s Used Books to fill my cup with new listening and reading material. Then ever onward to the Southeast’s premiere roots and rowdy rock circus known as Muddy Roots. Some interstate travel led to some back road highways led to some country road two lanes which eventually put us on a gravel path for a brief bit. This dusty trail gave way to the most majestic overview of a festival I’ve seen. The entrance road was situated higher and created a bird’s eye view of the festival grounds. Easily the best first impression for this reporter and avid festival goer. I hope all of the attendees took a moment to appreciate that view. After the usual quick credential and site securing, I was off with notebook in hand to catch the sights and sounds. Explosive sets all day from Sarah Shook and The Disarmers, Meat Puppets, Left Lane Cruiser, Joshua Black Wilkins, Megan Jean and the Klay Family Band, and iconic legends X and Dead Boys. Three continuous stages kept the music on rotation. The vibe of Muddy Roots was super relaxed and friendly and truly present to support the artists and the roots and punk rock community. I had a sense the entire time that everyone knew each other and some even knew me. Such a friendly space. Music was on tap all weekend but a true highlight was the set up of the event and its artisans and vendors. I loved the closeness of the stages and the “galley” design. Two larger stages bookended the quarter mile stretch with one large tent style stage in the middle. Convenient and always providing the sonic soundtrack on your commute to either end. The vendors were super roots and funky in nature and talent. Local apparel and leather goods, amazing food and artwork, even on site vinyl pressing from the good folks at Groove Family Records, purveyors of straight to vinyl recording. Also we can’t forget Jack White’s Third Man Records traveling record store was there. It’s exactly what it sounds like, a record store, like a food truck, where you order what you want. And I did.

Speaking with Joshua Black Wilkins, five time Muddy Roots artist, he has been especially attracted to the general grass roots spirit of the festival due to it’s lack of corporate sponsorship and that its always been about “Independent American Music”. There truly is a DIY vibe to the whole Muddy Roots festival and for me that is huge. As a touring musician, it’s lovely to see festivals of this size investing in the local artists and championing the spirit of continuing to nurture these artists.

“I really get why Muddy Roots has the reputation it does, people really enjoy being here and I really feel that”, said Byrne Klay, multi instrumentalist from duo Megan Jean and Klay Family Band.

Singer/guitarist Freddy from Left Lane Cruiser, six time Muddy Roots artist, felt blessed, honored and grateful to be back, as he navigated an hour long merch and autograph line. “Poppin’ as always” he exclaimed.

Huger thanks to Jason and the entire Muddy Roots crew for the amazing vibe and hospitality they provided me. A truly ground up festival supporting the local scene and that alone stole my heart immediately. Definitely be seeing you next year.

Next up was the massive beverage and band weekend known as Bourbon and Beyond. A two day barrel infused, heavy line up in the beautiful and “not far away” local city of Louisville, KY. A lovely jaunt up through the Kentucky trees and hills with the quickly changing landscape of season and weather. Never one to allow for negativity or conditions to overcast my mission of festival happiness, I cast out any concerns of inclement possibilities and soldiered on. Champions Park, conveniently located near the interstate and situated easily for entrance and exit, is a massive campus and prime for something as elaborate as Bourbon And Beyond. Spacious, tree lined, gorgeous and clearly widely admired by it’s city and residents. Their energy was tremendous. After credential pick up and site secured (I do this a lot), all to the lovely sounds of Larkin Poe stirring the pot on stage. I made my way around the festival complex. The staff was completely friendly, all vendors were lined out their tents (always a good sign), trademark spirits were abundant and the bands were giving the perfect rhythm as festival goers danced away and made the most of their first day. I also noticed quite a large amount of families with children which will always be a solid idea. Again, amazing vibes and wonderful sets from Larkin Poe, Joseph, JJ Grey and Mofro, Keb Mo, Billy Strings, Brian Setzer, Sheryl Crow, David Byrne, Lenny Kravitz and John Mayer. All back to back without a hitch. Just an incredible line of solid hitters. Although the second day was unfortunately cancelled due to weather, it was absolutely worth every effort to attend and be grateful for what I was fortunate to see. The entire event was Beyond what I could’ve only imagined. Amazing journey, fortunate connections and interactions, beyond solid musical soundtracks and vibe and a truly pleasant atmosphere. Ultimately the visible smiles outweighed any sort of unfortunate weather conditions and that’s the true test. Thank you Bourbon And Beyond.

Huge thanks to Kristine, Selena and all of the Bourbon And Beyond staff for the hospitality. also, huge thanks to the citizens and safe keepers of the city of Louisville. Count on seeing me next year for both Bourbon And Beyond AND Louder Than Life, two consecutive weekends at this truly local festival site? Sign me up!
Jill’s Soul Food, established in 2016, is a family owned business that offers southern comfort food made from scratch. The restaurant provides full service catering, including set-up and clean-up, for their customers’ parties and events.

Jill’s Soul Food, despite several hardships including closing the business, is back stronger than ever by creating a new menu focusing on country cooking, including meatloaf, spaghetti with meatballs, country fried chicken, fried catfish, smothered pork chops and rice, ham hocks and a plethora of other mouthwatering dishes.

At Jill’s Soul Food they serve only the best and freshest food made from scratch. Everyone who walks through their doors is treated with respect. Their belief is that it is imperative to make a long lasting impression on people and keep them coming back. They also provide help for their community in anyway they can by feeding the needy and assisting with school and community fund raisers.

For a great southern meal, visit Jill’s Soul Food, located at 1240 East Andrew Johnson Highway in Greeneville, TN 37745.

Halloween Movies & TV

It's the time of season for things that go bump in the night, howling winds and haunted houses. What better time to throw a Halloween party. If your party will include a movie or television show and needs to be family friendly, I will share a few recommendations this week for your consideration. Some of my choices may be obvious, while others are not. Here we go with my boorific (yes I make up that word) list of fun viewing for the Halloween season.

1- "It's The Great Pumpkin Charlie Brown"- No Halloween is complete without this treasure from the Peanuts gang. The television special first aired in 1966 and is an all-time classic. "I got a rock" is an unforgettable line from poor Charlie Brown. The search for the Great Pumpkin never ends. Since this is short, you may want to pair it with the animated "Scared Shrekless."

2- "Hocus Pocus"- Another must see movie at Halloween, this 1993 film starring Bette Midler, Sarah Jessica Parker and Kathy Najimy as wacky witches, was actually released to theaters in the summertime(!). The film has all the ingredients of a Halloween classic, and a sequel is finally in the works. Plus how can you go wrong with a talking cat?

3- "Hotel Transylvania"- This animated film featuring various famous monsters, led by Dracula (voiced by Adam Sandler), is a laugh riot. Yes, there have been two sequels since the 2012 original, but this one stands out as a true original. Remember, Dracula does not say "blah, blah, blah."

4- "The Addams Family"- The 1991 film is based on the 1960's television series and features Angelica Houston and Raul Julia in memorable performances as Morticia and Gomez Addams respectively. Despite strong performance from the aforementioned, Christopher Lloyd nearly steals the film as Uncle Fester. Oh and who can possible forget Christina Ricci as Wednesday Addams? They're creepy and they're kooky, mysterious and spooky, they're all together ooky.

5- "The Wizard of OZ"- This movie for Halloween? Why yes my dear children. What better movie to watch on Halloween than a film featuring a green skinned witch and flying monkeys? The haunted forest and witch's castle only add to the creepy fun. There's no place like home, especially if you have lions and tigers and bears. Oh my!

6- "The Munsters"- This television show which aired on CBS from 1964 to 1966, is a great way to introduce kids to the lovable yet hapless Herman Munster (Fred Gwynne) and his family of "friendly" monsters. Vampires and werewolves are also represented in the Munster family, and if you have ever dreamed of having a dragon as a pet, you will be green with envy as the Munsters have one living under their staircase.

7- "Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone"- What better time to revisit the first film in the Harry Potter series than on Halloween. This film began the series in 2001 which ended in 2011. With each film we marveled at the magical happenings at Hogwarts School and how the actors involved, led by Daniel Radcliffe, grew from kids to young adults. Magic in more ways than one.

8- "Batman Forever"- Another less obvious choice for the Halloween season was released to theaters in 1995, was set during Halloween, and featured wacky performances from Jim Carrey as The Riddler and Tommy Lee Jones as Two-Face. Val Kilmer starred as the Caped Crusader and Chris O'Donnell joined the cast as Robin. Just enough adventure, thrills and comedy to keep you entertained. Cheesy fun.

9- "Bewitched"- Not the unfortunate film from 2005, but the ABC television series that aired from 1964 to 1972. This comedy series provides pure fun and spooks for Halloween.

There you have my suggestions for a fun family friendly Halloween gathering. I will leave the more adult fare for you to decide. Happy viewing and see you next week or I will send the flying monkeys after you!
Queen of Outer Cyclops

Those Cinematic Crate Diggers over at Warner Archive have been over the last two years been releasing a number of classic B movie gems on blu-ray. Two of their most recent releases of 1950s sci-fi tinged schlock are 1956's "The Cyclops" and 1958's masterpiece of camp "Queen of Outer Space." Both films from studio Allied Artists, who made a string of low budget sci-fi thrillers during the 1950s including that all-time classic "Attack of the 50 Foot Woman."

Directed by Bert I. Gordon (AKA Mr. B.I.G.), a man who knew his way around a low-budget giant thing attacking movie, "The Cyclops" is a hit and quit it B picture thriller chocking in at a mere 66 minutes. Susan Winter (Gloria Talbott) organizes an expedition, including a pilot played by Lon Chaney, Jr., to the olds of Mexico in search of her navigator fiancé—whose plane crashed somewhere near the mountain regions.

What the team finds is a radiation-heavy area, with mutated animals that have grown to massive sizes, and a mutated human with one eye, some 25 feet tall! In some ways, this movie feels like a dry run for what Gordon would direct the following year, the giant man rampage film “The Amazing Colossal Man”—featured in a particularly good episode of “Mystery Science Theater 3000." “The Cyclops” has Gordon's impressive effects work for his limited budget, and it looks great in the new blu-ray from Warner Archive. If you’re a fan of Gordon’s work or giant "radiation run amok" films, pick this one up.

What can one say about the amazing movie "Queen of Outer Space?" What makes it so amazing? Is it a work of great technical merit? No, but it is a hoot and a half as one of the most gloriously campy 1950s Sci-Fi films ever made. Set in the far-flung future of 1985, an expedition of men set off to a space station, but after the station is destroyed by a beam of unknown origin, the rocket carrying the men crash-lands on Venus—a planet that is ruled entirely by women.

The ruling queen of the planet captures the men and vows to destroy the Earth—this is after one of the men have the prerequisite fight in a cave with a giant spider, mind you. During its 80 minute running time we see a bevy of recycled costumes and props from films such as “Forbidden Planet" and “Cat Women on the Moon." Starring no other than Zsa Zsa Gabor herself, along with Laurie Mitchell as the queen, “Queen of Outer Space” is pure fun from start to finish. It's ridiculous in the best way a 1950s sci-fi film could be. It takes itself just seriously enough for there to be lots of unintentional humor, but you can also tell people were having a good time making the film.

I first saw "Queen of Outer Space" in 2007 when it hit DVD from Warner Brothers, Warner Archive brings the film to blu-ray with a brand new 2K scan that bests the 2007 DVD in every way. Colors are much brighter, and the picture quality of the film overall is sharper. Ported over from that 2007 release is a commentary track between historian Tom Weaver, and Laurie Mitchell (who sadly passed away last month at the age of 90).

"Queen of Outer Space” is one of those fun titles that you think “boy, wouldn’t it be great to see this one on blu-ray” while never thinking that it’ll happen. Step in the wonderful folks at Warner Archive to remedy that with a fantastic looking disc of a super fun film that I’d give my biggest recommendation to one and all to watch. Both of these make for a fun double feature of 1950s sci-fi fringe, but if you can only watch one, it’s “Queen of Outer Space” all the way that gets my vote. See you next week.

Autumn in Tennessee Guided Waterfall Hike: Laurel Falls in Pond Mountain Wilderness

Join Southern Appalachian Wilderness Stewards on an Autumn Colors and Waterfall Hike on Saturday October 27, 2018.

We will explore Pond Mountain Wilderness as we hike along the Appalachian Trail.

The hike will be about 2.6 miles roundtrip and will follow the Appalachian Trail. The trail follows along an old railroad bed until we drop down into the gorge on a 1/4 mile of stone steps that lead to Laurel Fork Falls.

Laurel Falls is a popular destination for hikers due to its immense size (40’ high & 50’ wide) and picturesque setting.

Plan on this trip taking 3-4 hours so bring extra layers water, snacks and your lunch.

Space will be limited to 8 participants.

The Elizabethton/Carter County Animal Shelter is a Government operated Animal "Adoption Shelter." We only accept and adopt out domestic cats and dogs from Carter County. We do not accept Feral animals nor wildlife nor farm animals and we do not provide veterinary or euthanasia services to the public. We are a very small shelter and do not kill animals to make space to take in more animals. Just like a hospital, nursing home or human shelter, when we are full we are full. We do have a waiting list and, as we adopt pets out and have room, we will accept new animals.

CALL WQUT @ 477-1015 FOR MORE CONCERT INFORMATION
Broad Street on State Retro Diner was established on January 15th, 2014. Making their debut inside the iconic Original Acme Hot Dog building on Broad street. However, in 2016 they relocated to the former, historic F.W. Woolworth’s Lunch counter, located right in the heart of historic downtown Bristol. Their mission is to delight guests in a way that creates a memorable experience and keeps them coming back.

There’s truly something special about eating at Broad Street on State - old fashion customer service, retro atmosphere, a 45 foot long lunch counter, vintage decor… but most of all homemade comfort food made the “New Old Fashioned Way”. Nearly 90% of the items on their menu are made from scratch and everything is always made to order. Their eclectic menu has a little something for everyone including Hand-Pattied Burgers, 100% All-Beef Hot Dogs, Signature Hot-Deli Sandwiches, Homemade Meat Chilli, Fried Tacos, Homemade Meatloaf, Pull Pork BBQ, Soups, Fresh Salads, Homemade Desserts & much more! They also feature all of the American Classic hot dogs such as the Bristol Dog, Tennessee Dog, Virginia Dog, and the Cheesy Dog. Daily specials include Meatloaf Mondays, Taco Tuesdays, Lunch Box Wednesdays, and Retro Thursdays which include a Homestyle cooked meal.

Visit Broad Street on State Retro Diner and Lunch counter located beside Uncle Sam’s Loan Office at 616 State Street, Bristol, TN 37620 or give them a call at 423-652-0700.

MOON THINGS

These are a Few of MarQ's Favorite Moon Things

A full, Harvest Moon week reminds me of my favorite Moon shines...

As a kid growing up during the 1960s and the Moon Race with the Soviet Union, I have no memories of not owning a telescope and looking at the Moon. Over the decades, there are some favorite memories about Moon lore and fact, which I share:

The Moon changes by the hour. The shadows along the terminator—the line between day and night—are always an interplay of detail. After an hour, a mountain peak might appear out of the blackness.

I've seen dozens of Lunar Eclipses, and as beautiful as they are, what I remember best are the people and places shared with my best friends on Earth—amateur astronomers!

Moon is not a “four letter” word, though serious stargazers complain that the moonlight washes out nebulae, galaxies and other deep sky wonders. But the Moon is the best place to learn how to use a telescope, using a chart to identify features, maybe making sketches or photographs.

Moon features are fun to learn and have lots of history from the lunar cartographers who named them. The dark “seas” are named in Latin, i.e. Mare Crisium is the Sea of Crisis; Oceanus Procellarum, the Ocean of Storms; Sinus Iridium, Bay of Rainbows; and Mare Nectaris, the Sea of Nectar (imagine that!) Craters are named after history’s scientists with a few great leaders and politicians (Copernicus, Tycho and Caesar).

Moon is the name of Earth’s moon. Which I find strange. It doesn’t have a proper noun name, like Phobos of Mars, Titan of Saturn and all the moons of Uranus named after Shakespeare characters (like Puck and Miranda).

Most of the time our natural satellite is seen written in a lower-case moon, not the proper pronoun, capital “M” Moon. The Romans called it Luna. To the Greeks it is Selene, and the ancient Egyptians called it Isis.

I’ve had the privilege of twice interviewing the late Apollo 16 moonwalker John Young, a space hero of mine. He told me during a media interview that moon dust smelled like gunpowder and made his skin itchy, like fiberglass. That makes sense as the Moon’s pock-marked surface is the result of millions impacts with cosmic debris, including billions of years of constant bombardment by micrometeorites—space dust. Under a microscope, moon dust is tiny, pointed shards of rock.

I’ve also met several times Apollo 17 moonwalker Harrison “Jack” Schmitt, who was the only geologist to go to the Moon. The first time I met astronaut Schmitt was at a talk at The University of Tennessee, and I was filled with anticipation and intelligent questions. In the men’s room beforehand, Schmitt appeared at the urinal beside me—not the place to strike up a chit-chat about Moon rocks! Believe me, I thoroughly washed my hands for a hand shake out in the hall.

Many scientists in the 17th and 18th Centuries thought it perfectly normal to consider the Moon inhabited by intelligent creatures. One of the greatest astronomers was Sir William Herschel, discoverer of Uranus in 1781 and cataloger of thousands of telescopic celestial objects. Herschel was convinced that the Moon was inhabited by intelligent beings and said so on the front pages of the London Times. He was frustrated that his telescopes couldn’t find lunar cities.

Hold your hand out at arm’s length toward the Moon and cover it with your pinky finger. That’s one-half a degree of sky. That means 180 Full Moons would span in a line from the east horizon to directly overhead. And then 180 more moons to reach the west horizon. The Moon is 2,120 miles across and an average of 240,000 miles away.

As bright at the Full Moon looks, it is really a poor reflector, sending back only 17 per cent of the sunlight that strikes it. The percentage of reflected light is called “albedo,” and the Moon’s albedo is about the same as a lump of coal. In fact, a well-warn asphalt highway is about the same grey color of the thick, surface moon dust.

There is no dark side of the Moon. There is always half of the Moon illuminated and half in darkness, just like half of the Earth is either in the dark of night or sunshine of the day.

The backside of the Moon is what we don’t see and it’s completely different. It is covered with thousands of craters with only a couple small, dark “Maria” of ancient lava seas and no mountain ranges. Due to a slight wobble of the Moon called “liberation,” we see some of the backside on the east and west limbs, accounting for 59 per cent of the lunar surface area.

I “own” a piece of our Moon...at least I paid $20 for a deed from the Lunar Republic Society for Tract 18, Parcel 1386 in the Sea of Vapors! It’s near the nice, 24-mile wide crater Manilius near the center of the Moon. I plan to visit my plot soon. Me?

Crazy about the Moon? Sheer lunacy!

October is here and it is probably the one month in the entire year when people deliberately seek out activities that they already know will scare them right out of their own skin. We all do it anyways though, right? Whether it be watching and re-watching classic horror flicks such as Stephen King’s "It" or John Carpenter’s "Halloween" or spending a night in an abandoned house, there are plenty of ways to get into the Halloween spirit.

This year there are quite a few haunted attractions in the Tri-Cities area as well as some spooky and kid-friendly events.

White curtains frame a '50s-style diner table with red vinyl bench seats and cup of coffee waiting. Leafless trees, patchy snow, empty warehouses and unmanned equipment dot the Hudson River's edge. Dark clouds loom over a weathered yellow house rimmed with weeds, featuring an unwelcoming "private property" sign in the yard.

Tema Stauffer’s lens sees barns collapsing, weeds encroaching, structures deteriorating, cars rusting and world-worn eyes staring after history has been made and nature often has reclaimed the landscape. There’s a haunted, quality and an eerie sense of peace.

"The little yellow house on Wire Road in Germantown always caught my attention whenever I drove past it..." Stauffer says. "This [photo in the UPSTATE series] generally seems to captivate viewers the most. I think there is a little house that lives in many of our imaginations and this one perhaps speaks to our childhoods and sense of home."

The Yellow and Stauffer’s other photographs from the Hudson, N.Y., area that constitute the "UPSTATE" exhibition will spark imaginations and memories at East Tennessee State University’s Reece Museum Oct. 22-Dec. 14.

Stauffer, who holds an MFA in photography from University of Illinois-Chicago, is marking her second year as professor of photography at ETSU, and the "UPSTATE" exhibition says Anita DeAngelis, director of exhibition co-sponsor Mary B. Martin School of the Arts, is a good way for the campus and community to get to know Stauffer and her work.

"In her photographs of Hudson, N.Y., Tema Stauffer has produced an original body of work while acknowledging the histories and capabilities of her medium," says independent scholar and photography curator Alison Nordström. Her treatments of the area’s landscapes and modest buildings often employ a dark and moody palette, appropriate to a region that Minor White described as being always 18 percent gray.

"The impression this produces is hushed, meditative and nostalgic, suggesting a degree of timelessness..."

While Stauffer’s images depict moments in time from upstate New York, the scenes are also universal, says Stauffer, whose passion for photography has taken her to state fairs, water parks, dog shows, locales out West and in Florida, on police ride-alongs in Chicago and to the city streets of Paterson, N.J.

"In her photographs of Hudson, N.Y., Tema Stauffer has produced an original body of work while acknowledging the histories and capabilities of her medium," says independent scholar and photography curator Alison Nordström. Her treatments of the area’s landscapes and modest buildings often employ a dark and moody palette, appropriate to a region that Minor White described as being always 18 percent gray.

The "UPSTATE" series incorporates images portraying the [Hudson] river, as well as abandoned industrial and home sites that appear almost haunted, says Stauffer, but she hopes the camera looks past the surface, into the past and at the present. Amid the deserted landscapes and homes, Stauffer also injects humanity and an eye to the future.

As Nordström notes in her essay accompanying Stauffer’s book, UPSTATE: Photographs by Tema Stauffer, published by Daylight Books this fall, "While Hudson may be marked with its industrial past, the portraits of three of its present-day inhabitants show immediacy, liveliness and a connection between artist and individual that helps us see her non-human subjects as equally compelling, understood and admired.

American history and literature, as well as the struggles and identities of American people, are the driving forces of Stauffer's photography, she says. "My three years living and teaching in Canada only reinforced my awareness of American life as the central subject of my artistic vision and practice."

Through photography about the American landscape and people, Stauffer says, viewers can learn about complicated histories: multiculturalism, social and personal identities, environmental and economic issues, and most importantly, how we fit into, impact and change any or all of this.

To assist the community in making these connections, several collateral events are planned. On Wednesday, Oct. 24, at 5 p.m., Xhenet Aliu will present a reading of her foreword for the "UPSTATE" monograph, as well as selections from her recent novel, Brass.

On Wednesday, Nov. 7, Stauffer will give an artist talk at noon, where she will discuss earlier bodies of work, as well as the photographs of UPSTATE. Then, on Thursday, Nov. 29, at 5 p.m., Nordström, a renowned photo historian, will share her perspectives on the exhibition. All the accompanying events also will be held in Reece Museum.

"The Reece is honored to host UPSTATE," says Reece Museum Director Randy Sanders. "Stauffer's powerful, sublime images inform and indelibly impress upon the viewer an ever-changing America. While the subject matter is upstate New York, one can easily see a strong and immediate connection to the people and land of Southern Appalachia."

"UPSTATE," Nordström says, "is both an indisputable portrait of Hudson, and a general meditation on the marks of human activity everywhere."

Jacob’s Nature Park at Sinking Creek
Arboretum to be unveiled at grand opening

Jacob’s Nature Park at Sinking Creek will host the official opening of its latest environmental learning feature on Monday, Oct. 29, from 4:30-6 p.m. The Tennessee Urban Forestry Council has certified the feature as a Level I arboretum, making Jacob’s Nature Park Arboretum the third in Washington County to hold the certification.

The arboretum includes signage identifying nearly three dozen tree species, with more signs planned. Signs will include codes that direct smartphone users to a Jacob’s Park Arboretum link on PlantsMap.com, on which visitors can identify each tree by its scientific and common names, as well as the butterfly and/or moth species supported by the tree type.

“I was very moved when I read the story of how Jacob’s Park came into existence, and this arboretum seems a perfect addition to such a natural, peaceful setting,” said Jill Smith, TUFC executive director.

Attendees will gather at the park’s entrance at 1220 King Springs Road where information will be provided about the arboretum, how the idea came about, what it adds to the park’s value, how the digital resource makes learning more robust, and how the arboretum was joined with the park’s pollinator element.

Attendees can tour the park’s lower section and ridge, time permitting. Overflow parking will be available at Rich Acres Freewill Baptist Church, 1245 King Springs Road.

Jacob’s Nature Park at Sinking Creek is a City park consisting of 28 acres of restored wetlands and steep wooded slopes. Its development was spearheaded by local attorney Bill Francisco in honor of his son Jacob, who died in 2004 of a bacterial infection caused by E. coli thought to have come from the creek. To learn more about Jacob’s Nature Park, visit jacobfrancisco.com. For information about the arboretum grand opening, call 423-283-5821.
